Military Doctor Who Provided Soldiers with Reasonable Accommodations for Medical COVID-19 Vaccine Exemptions, Facing Discharge

Samuel Sigoloff, Director of the Raymond W. Bliss Medical Center at Fort Huachuca facing Army reprisal for assisting in COVID-19 vaccine exemptions

FORT HUACHUCA – US Army MAJ Doctor Samuel Sigoloff has been relieved from his role as Director of the Raymond W. Bliss Medical Center at Fort Huachuca in Sierra Vista, AZ for providing soldiers with reasonable accommodations for COVID-19 vaccine MEDICAL exemptions and waivers. Dr. Sigoloff also prescribed soldiers Ivermectin as a preventive COVID-19 treatment which ultimately led to his removal.

Although Mr. Sigoloff was trying to assist service men and women, he faces the loss of his medical license due to his command questioning his ethics.

“My client’s command has prevented life-saving medications from getting to patients by banning Ivermectin,” said Sean Timmons, Managing Partner of Tully Rinckey PLLC’s Houston, Texas office who is representing Sigoloff. “Dr. Sigoloff has been removed from all medical duties due to his willingness to advocate for soldiers who were trying to receive medical waivers to avoid the mandatory vaccination.”

Dr. Sigoloff’s status is currently pending a peer review and further adverse action from his chain of command. His licensing case with the State of Texas is also pending a hearing.

For more information or to speak with Mr. Timmons via phone or videoconference, please contact Tiarnan Barrett at (518) 640-1225 or via email at tbarrett@tullylegal.com.
