Dear Judge May,

My name is Jay Adcock. I first met Brant shortly after my wife and I moved into the neighborhood in March of 2021. Brant would walk or jog past the house, and when he would see me outside working he would stop and we would talk. We had a lot in common, our faith, our outlook on life, and we quickly became friends.

In 2023 my wife was [REDACTED]. During that time Brant would always ask how she was doing and how I was holding up. He encouraged me consistently and prayed for us regularly, always praying for complete healing.

At one of the hardest points in my wife's illness, a care package arrived from Brant. It was completely unexpected and it meant more to us than I can put into words. He continued to check on us throughout her treatment and rejoiced with us when she came through it.

Brant has been a good friend in the few years we have known each other. We still talk and pray together whenever we cross paths. Even now, as he walks through his own difficult season, he continues to be an encouragement to others. That is simply who he is.

Sincerely,
Jay Adcock

Character Reference Letter for Bryant Frost

Dear Judge May,

I have known Brant Frost over the last 10years, as part of Christian men prayer team and also in a business capacity.

After departing as Executive Vice President at Domino's Pizza USA - writing the next chapter of my life, involved a 3-year transition.

During the three-year transition period that followed - Brant Frost went beyond expectation to support my family. He provided the much need spiritual guidance with access to his vast network of business professionals available to me.

His mentoring and coaching have helped me immensely to prevent mental health issues during the 3year transition.

Brant is a family man, a devoted community leader and law-abiding citizen. He stresses integrity in all things. He's usually the first to first to flag issues that borders on integrity or violates the law.

Dear Judge May,

I first met Brant Frost in 2005 at a weekly men's worship and prayer gathering known as the Wednesday Warriors. This early-morning fellowship brought together Christian men from across the Atlanta region who gathered to worship, pray, encourage one another, and seek God's wisdom for their families, churches, and communities. After many of these meetings, Brant and several of us would continue our conversations over breakfast.

At the time, I was serving at a Christian school in Kennesaw and Brant, and I frequently discussed one of the most important challenges facing Christian parents: How do we raise children who will remain faithful to God's unchanging truth in an increasingly secular culture?

Those conversations left a lasting impression on me. Brant was never interested in simply talking about the problems. He was deeply committed to finding practical, biblical solutions. One example has stayed with me over the years. Brant shared that he and his wife made the significant decision to relocate their family to Newnan because they believed the environment in their previous community was exposing their children to influences that could undermine the faith they were working so hard to instill. It was not merely a move to a different house—it was a deliberate decision to place their children's spiritual, moral, and emotional well-being ahead of their own interests.

In 2008, my family moved to Newnan after I accepted a position at Trinity Christian School. Brant graciously volunteered his time to help me find a home and introduced me to many people throughout the region. His kindness and willingness to help us made our transition much easier and reminded me of the genuine Christian hospitality that characterizes his life.

A few years later, when both of my wife's parents passed away in late 2011, Brant again proved to be an invaluable friend. He generously shared practical wisdom and sound advice as we navigated the many challenges of settling their estate. His counsel was thoughtful, compassionate, and incredibly helpful during a difficult season in our lives.

Today, I live and work in the Boston area, but my wife and I look forward to retiring to Newnan someday soon, even though our children live on the north side of Atlanta. Why? Because friends like Brant Frost exemplify the kind of character that draws us back to that area—men of integrity who love their families, serve others with humility, and remain steadfast in their commitment to the Lord.

I have known Brant over 20 years, and I feel that his life has consistently reflected the principles he professes, and I have always considered him a trusted friend, a man of wisdom, and a positive influence in my life. It a privilege to know him.

Sincerely,

Homer

Dear Judge May:

I am writing this letter because I want to share with you the person I have come to know during the past nine months through my friendship with Mr. Frost.

I first met Mr. Frost when I contacted him about a Generac generator for my home. During one of our conversations, I mentioned that our church was in need of two new air-conditioning units. What started as a conversation about a generator quickly became something much more meaningful to me. Rather than simply discussing the equipment, Mr. Frost took an interest in our church and began offering suggestions about ways we could raise the money needed for the new units.

He shared ideas and encouraged us to think about ways we could raise the funds without placing the church in unnecessary debt. I am thankful to say that, following those efforts, our church was able to purchase two new air-conditioning units completely debt-free. That experience gave me an early glimpse of the kind of person Mr. Frost is—someone who is willing to listen, offer encouragement, and use his knowledge and experience to help others.

Since that first meeting, Mr. Frost and I have had lunch together several times. Our conversations have gone far beyond business. We have talked about our lives, our families, our experiences, and, most importantly, our faith and how the Lord is working in our lives.

Those conversations have allowed me to get to know Mr. Frost on a much more personal level. I have come to appreciate his willingness to talk openly about his faith and his desire to encourage others. He has never made our conversations simply about himself. He has been interested in other people and in finding ways to help them.

Mr. Frost has also attended services at our church. While there, he has taken the time to speak with several members of our congregation and encourage them to think creatively about raising funds to further the kingdom of the Lord. I have personally watched him invest his time and knowledge in people who could benefit from his encouragement.

I realize that nine months is not a lifetime, but I believe that meaningful relationships can develop in a relatively short period of time. In the time I have known Mr. Frost, I have seen kindness, generosity, faith, and a willingness to help others. I have personally benefited from his advice, and I have seen him encourage others as well.

I am not writing this letter to excuse anything that has brought Mr. Frost before the Court, nor would I presume to tell the Court how to carry out its responsibilities. I simply believe that a person should be known for more than the circumstances surrounding one difficult period of his life. I hope the Court will consider the person I have personally come to know during these past nine months.

Mr. Frost has made a positive impression on me, my church, and members of our congregation. I am grateful that our paths crossed, and I am thankful for the friendship that has developed between us.

Thank you, Judge May, for taking the time to read my letter and for allowing me the opportunity to share my personal experience with Mr. Frost. I respectfully ask that you consider these observations about his character and the positive impact I have personally witnessed him have on others.

Respectfully,

Morris Jerome Bailey

Dear Judge May,

I have known Brant Frost IV for over 20 years. During that time, he was pivotal in helping me connect with a group of men that I continue to meet with weekly today.

One experience in particular stands out to me as an example of Brant's character.

Several years ago, I began picking up a blind man so that he could attend our weekly meetings. I drove him to and from the meetings for a season, but eventually it became difficult for me to continue because my responsibilities required me to arrive early to set up equipment and remain afterward to pack everything up.

When I could no longer manage both responsibilities, Brant stepped in.

For an extended period of time, he went considerably out of his way to pick this man up, bring him to our meetings, and return him home afterward. What impressed me was that Brant didn't simply provide transportation. He helped him become part of the group, stayed alongside him during the meetings, and made sure he was included and cared for.

Doing this required a genuine sacrifice of Brant's time and freedom, and he continued doing it for someone who had nothing to offer him in return.

I experienced that same concern personally when I [REDACTED] and, later, [REDACTED]. During a season when it would have been easy for me to become isolated, Brant helped rally other men around me. He reached out with encouragement and continued to express confidence in me and in my ability to fulfill my leadership responsibilities.

Over the years I have known him, I have repeatedly seen Brant make himself available to encourage and support people around him.

These are a few of the experiences I have personally witnessed over more than two decades of knowing Brant, and I hope they provide some insight into the man I have known.

Respectfully,

Joel Balin

DR C. MARK BOYD

Dear Judge May,

30 JULY 2026

It is my honor to write to you regarding my personal knowledge of and experience with Brant Frost and the Frost family.

Thirty years ago, when I moved to Newnan, Georgia, to minister to and serve the people of Coweta County, I quickly became aware of a shared desire among many local community and church leaders to develop a more unified effort to serve the area's growing population, increasing diversity, and expanding needs. Brant Frost was one of the first local leaders to support that vision and help bring it into reality.

During the years that followed, Brant volunteered his time and served admirably in numerous leadership roles focused on creating and maintaining a unified approach to meeting the spiritual, social, and humanitarian needs of the community. He served alongside me as cochairman of several communitywide events, including an evangelistic crusade and a children's festival.

Brant also helped plan and support numerous rallies for middle school, high school, and college-age students. These events addressed serious concerns such as illegal drug use, gang involvement, bullying, peer pressure, and criminal activity.

In addition to his leadership in these efforts, Brant has been actively involved in many charitable projects. These have included helping provide food for distribution, coats, book bags, and school supplies. He has also helped raise awareness and support for individuals and families who lost their possessions because of fire.

These examples, along with many others I could provide, demonstrate the character, compassion, and genuine concern that Brant and his family have consistently shown for the quality of life and well-being of others.

Without reservation, I commend Brant Frost and the Frost family to you. Thank you for your time and for considering my personal knowledge and experience as part of your deliberation.

Sincerely,

Dr. Mark Boyd

I am so happy for this opportunity of telling you about the Brant Trust that I know.

Many years ago, in Macon, GA, my husband and I were very good friends of his parents.

Then we moved away ~~from~~ and I returned after my husband died. Our friendship resumed. A year later Brant's father died and his mother joined me in widowhood.

That's when Brant entered the picture! He was always attentive then but even more so after his mother [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] and long needy. Her son decided she needed assistant living, so moved her to Carle Place, where I was already an independent resident.

Every Friday Brant drove from Newnan to Macon spending the entire day bringing joy to his mother. He took her to get her hair done, to lunch at the restaurant of her choice,
