

and anything else her heart desired! Occasionally I was asked to join them for lunch - such a treat.

During that time I was the recipient of Brant's thoughtfulness.

I [REDACTED] on a cruise and was a patient in the skilled nursing section of Carle Place for 6 weeks. When Brant came to visit his mom he would often wheel her down to my room for a talk fest. I mentioned one visit that my coffee was always cold. Best thing I knew, he presented me with a Keurig coffee maker, complete with pods, 3 kinds of sweetener and cream.

He is a dear friend and brother in Christ. May God give you a merciful heart as you determine his future.

Most sincerely,

Jim

Regarding: Brant Frost IV

Dear Judge May,

I have known Brant Frost IV since the 1980's. He is a strong Christian who has always believed in doing what is right. His focus has always been to help others and to promote the principles in which he believes. He has continually been an honorable person with a strong moral code. Brant is a good man!

Dear Judge May,

Brant and I first met each other in Macon, Georgia in the early 1980's...We were both young entrepreneurs and chasing our dreams together. My memories of Brant in those early days are that he was an outgoing, caring person...he was always positive and uplifting in his dealings with me and everyone else. He was, as I recall, a straight shooter...meaning he was direct about what he believed and he had very good morals. We both moved away and lost touch with each other over the years.

Fast forward approximately 25+ years and I get a knock on my door and it's none other than Brant Frost! I was surprised, embarrassed and frankly ashamed for him to see me in the state I was in ... you see I was right in the middle of the most difficult time of my adult life ... [REDACTED] [REDACTED]. I was living alone in the home my wife and I had purchased in Hampton, Georgia. My wife Tracy and I were separated at the time...we subsequently divorced. She had moved to Alabama with our daughter Grace to get away from me and all the chaos of the lifestyle I had allowed myself to fall into.

So here comes Brant Frost knocking on my door...saying HELLO! He was dressed in his suit just the way he and I use to dress back in our younger days...always so sharp and ready to conquer the world....I was a shell of the man compared to my younger days...I had lost my family, been fired from numerous jobs and in foreclosure on my home.....as my wife stated ..."your living in a tomb".

Brant literally tracked me down, he didn't know my address or my phone number he heard I was in trouble and came back into my life and rescued me from the garbage heap of life literally picked me up and carried me to church and encouraged me to get the help I so desperately needed. I was basically homeless...no job...divorced and honestly had no hope.....I made the decision to move to Alabama and join a recovery home...a 12 month program to get your life back on track. Brant highly encouraged me to follow through with this decision ...in fact he was on my wife Tracy's side through all of this...he said I needed to step up and be a man and do the right thing by her and my daughter....Thank you Brant Frost!...for caring enough about your fellow man and tracking me down! Thank you for rescuing me! My wife Tracy and I remarried here in Alabama and we are a family together again...My daughter is now married to a wonderful young man, I have my own Insurance agency and it is going very well. Tracy and I purchased a home here in the Fairview/Cullman Alabama area.

We are so thankful for Brant.

It is indeed an honor to write this letter as a reference for his character....he has made a difference and changed the trajectory of our lives in a better way...to say the least.

If anyone deserves the benefit of the doubt it's Brant Frost. We love and appreciate you Brant.

Most respectfully yours,

Dear Judge May:

Thank you for the opportunity of sharing with you the character of Brant Frost. I have no business or other connection with Mr. Frost. I have known him since 1990. When we are together, we share our views on politics. During the nineties, he and I were leaders in opposing camps fighting for control of the Coweta County Republican Party. We fought like cats and dogs, even at one point, coming close to blows. During this struggle, I never saw him doing anything that I would consider unethical.

Brant Frost impresses me as a man who cares deeply about his family and his country. I served on a bank board for 20 years, and saw tellers become involved in indiscretions which later they said started small and got the best of them. I believe this is likely what happened to Brant.

My reason for writing is that I do not believe it would service society or the victims or Mr. Frost to give him an inordinately long sentence, because, in effect, due to his age, it would be a life sentence. A light sentence would give him the opportunity to make some restitution, and I see no benefit to the state of Georgia keeping him incarcerated for a long time. I am convinced that he is committed to doing what he can if he is able to get out before he is too elderly.

Thank you again for your consideration.

Dear Judge May,

I am pleased to have this opportunity to offer my word of support for my good friend Brant Frost.

I first met Brant in 2007 when he visited Iowa. We have kept in touch since that time and became good friends.

Brant is a committed family man and active in support for his community, state and country.

He is the kind of friend who always wants to know how you are doing and what he can do for you. He loves his family and serves them sacrificially.

We have many friends in life and a few very close friends. Brant is one of those people that I would consider a close friend, and that closeness is only compromised by the geographic distance that separates us.

I am thankful that I know him and I look forward to many more years of friendship.

Dear Judge May,

I first met Brant in the mid to late 1980s at Holy Spirit Harvest Church in Macon, GA. We both attended that church led by Pastor Sam Drye. From then and for decades our relationship was limited to cordial greetings and brief conversations at church. Brant was always gentle, cordial, loving, and a friendly conversationalist.

Sometime in the mid - late 2010s Brant, who lived in Newnan, would periodically visit Sam in Macon. I'm not sure if he was making these trips prior to Sam's wife's death in 2016. I had been visiting with Sam and Rheba almost every Wednesday afternoon for a number of years starting prior to Rheba's death. Sam would always mention it when one of the old Holy Spirit Harvest Church members would reach out to him. I cannot remember specific dates or frequencies though.

I'm not sure exactly when but sometime in the late 2010s or early 2020s Brant started visiting Sam more frequently than before. It might have been because Brant's Mother was in a nearby nursing home or long-term care facility. I was grateful because my job at the time was preventing me from visiting Sam as often as I had in the past. Brant would send me selfies of him and Sam; they always put a smile on my face. I knew Sam well enough to know how precious Brant's visits were to him.

I am eternally grateful for the (as it turned out) last day Brant saw Sam alive. Brant had made his customary visit with Sam to the nursing home but this time something was different. Brant called me shortly after leaving the nursing home and said he didn't think Sam wanted to live much longer and that Sam wanted to see me. My wife and I raced over, spoke with Sam and agreed with him in prayer. He died later that night. If Brant had not called me, I would not have been able to see Sam one more time and pray with him. Sam had been my pastor, mentor, prayer partner, friend, shoulder to cry on, and father figure. I'm so grateful Brant understood my love for Sam, honored Sam's wishes, and let me know.

Brant didn't have to visit Sam all those times; I'm sure his schedule was compressed like everyone else's. But he did. Unbeknownst to him, Brant became my substitute when I couldn't visit Sam due to my workload. Brant made sacrifices for Sam. No greater love does a man have, than to lay down his life for his friend (John 15:13). Thank you, Brant Frost, for being Sam's friend and mine.

Dear Judge May,

We are writing to offer our personal observations regarding the character of Brant Frost, whom we have known for over 35 years as friends. As a couple married for 50 years, we value commitment, integrity, and the importance of community—qualities we have seen consistently in our friend throughout our long association.

We are aware of the charges to which Brant has pleaded guilty, and we do not seek to minimize nor defend the harm caused by those actions. Innocent people were hurt, and we recognize the gravity of what occurred.

What we wish to convey is the person we have come to know across more than three decades. Brant has been, in our observation, a devoted spouse, a caring father, and a family man.

A few months ago, Brant spoke with us about the case. He expressed profound remorse for his failures and the damage he caused. He conveyed sincere regret for harming people who trusted in him and shared his earnest desire to restore what was lost and make right the wrongs committed. That moment revealed to us a person confronting his mistakes with honesty and accountability.

While we cannot undo the consequences of his actions, we respectfully submit this letter to provide context for the court regarding the individual behind the offense—a man who has maintained loving family bonds and who now faces the full weight of his choices with apparent sincerity.

We ask for leniency in his sentencing in the hope that he can correct his mistake(s) as quickly as he committed them.

Respectfully,

Dear Judge May,

I am writing to respectfully request your consideration in the matter of Brant Frost's character. My wife and I have known Brant for over twenty-five years. We got to know Brant when he and his family faithfully attended Atlanta Christian Center (now New City Church, Fairburn, GA) where I had worked as an associate pastor. Brant was an active member who enjoyed serving others.

When we needed some financial advice regarding the sale of our home in College Park, Brant personally visited us twice. He took the time to carefully explain some options and pray with us. He also recommended an attorney for us to finalize the sale. He did this without compensation and genuinely desired our best.

Brant volunteered his time to raise funds for the Jesus Film project to distribute the Jesus Film to all the residents of Coweta County. He helped lead the effort to coordinate with local churches and assisted with the distribution.

My wife and I have always known Brant to be kind and generous.

Thank you for your attention to this matter and for your service to our community.

Respectfully,

Dear Judge May,

I am writing this character reference on behalf of my dear friend, Brant Frost. I have known Brant for eight years, having first met him under circumstances that immediately demonstrated his exceptional character, compassion, and persistence.

Our first contact occurred eight years ago when Brant called me out of the blue. He was visiting Freeport, Maine, with his family and came across a homeless individual who was clearly in desperate need of help. Knowing no one in the state, Brant spent hours tracking down potential local resources to assist this person. Someone eventually directed him to me because of the organization I was leading at the time, the Christian Civic League of Maine. Brant's relentless effort and persistence on behalf of a total stranger ultimately led to a positive outcome for that individual.

Impressive first impressions turned into a deep personal friendship when we met for lunch the following summer. Over the years, our bond grew over shared values and mutual respect. Brant's hospitality and generosity are unmatched; when I was stranded in Atlanta due to a canceled flight, he insisted that I stay at his home, which included an offer to drive to the airport to personally pick me up and return me early the next morning. Furthermore, one quality I uniquely appreciate in Brant is his ability to engage in spirited, vehement debate while remaining entirely respectful. During long hikes together over the years, we vigorously discussed highly controversial topics—discussions that pushed both of us to be challenged, refine our positions, and question our assumptions. That level of intellectual honesty and grace is a rare quality today.

Brant's deep love for his country and his neighbor emanates directly from his faith in Jesus Christ, a faith we both share. His genuine care for others—demonstrated so clearly by his actions in Freeport and his selflessness to friends in need—reflects a heart that truly seeks to serve people. I am proud to call Brant a friend, and I hope this reflection on his character provides helpful context as you consider his background.

Dear Judge May,

My name is Chad Connelly, and I have a 501 C3 ministry called Faith Wins that encourages Christians to engage the culture with their voices and influence. I have known Brant Frost for over 10 years, mostly because he has been an active encourager to me and my family. Brant did donate to my organization for one year that I can remember, but he was a longtime friend and "balcony person" in my life for many years prior to that donation. Every time I saw him at any event, he made a point to seek me out, ask me about our work, encourage me and introduce me to others who needed to know about our work.

I have known Brant to be a Christian father, husband and friend during these 10 years and someone that I personally look up to as an example in those areas of my life.

Thank you and God bless,

Dear Judge May:

Three things come to mind for me when I think of Brant Frost; faith, family, and friendship. While just one of these would be sufficient to build a strong relationship on, he excels in all three.

Our families first met at a conference nearly 20 years ago that centered on strengthening and building families. By that evening, we had enjoyed a dinner together and though our families were different in size, background, and even our faith circles (I think that is why they call them “denominations” – what divides us) it was all part of what drew us together. My strongest first impressions of Brant, hold true to this day. His love and admiration for his wife, his kindness and sincerity toward others, and his devotion to his children remains unchanged.

While our day to day lives were very different, over the years our paths often crossed at the intersection of those things we share in common. When our paths did cross, Brant was always kind, genuine, intentional and caring. He always came across to me as the promoter of “others”. Our conversations never centered on him, but always included a mention of his family, my family or some relevant past event that I seldom recalled except at his prompting. He had a way of inspiring the best in others, by building them up and encouraging them. It is my strong impression that Brant put the interests of others before his own and was constantly in pursuit of that goal. Brant never sought the limelight, but worked tirelessly to help others achieve their goals.

What is the measure of a man? I know for me, my hope is that my children will flourish in the areas of common ground that built the relationship I share with Brant: faith, family, and friendship. I see all his children doing just that, flourishing in those areas, despite the current circumstance. Motivated by hope, anchored in faith, strengthened by family and encouraged through friendship; his legacy will be his children and I think that speaks very well, and most clearly of my friend, Brant Frost.

Sincerely,

Mike Crane

Dear Judge May:

I am writing this letter on behalf of my long-time friend, Brant Frost IV.

Brant and I first met as young boys while attending the same grammar school in Macon, Georgia, during the 1960s and became good friends. Our families knew one another and lived in the same neighborhood. Although we attended different high schools, we remained acquainted, and after graduation in 1975 our lives naturally went in different directions.

In the early 1990s we reconnected when Brant became good friends with my father and volunteered, along with others, in my father's campaigns for the United States Congress in 1990 and 1992. During that period, I became reacquainted with Brant again through occasional visits and phone conversations. It was then that I became aware of his deep interest in public affairs and, more importantly, of his sincere Christian faith.

Over the past three decades, our contact has been infrequent, perhaps only a double handful of personal visits and occasional phone calls or emails. While we have not shared day-to-day life activities together, our friendship has remained one of mutual respect and periodic connection that has endured since childhood.

As I prepared this letter, I noticed an email I had sent Brant in November 2023 sharing a gospel message that I believed he would appreciate. He thanked me and said he looked forward to watching it. Then, in January 2025, I wrote Brant a handwritten letter expressing my gratitude for the encouragement he has been to me in various ways. In that letter, I thanked him for what I had observed from a distance over the years—his desire to seek God, his faithfulness to his family, and the care and kindness he consistently showed toward others. Those words reflected my honest understanding of Brant's character, which I know to be the same to this very day.

I do not know the details of Brant's business, how it developed, or the circumstances that ultimately led to these offenses. What I can affirm from public records, which also ascribes to Brant's character, is that Brant has acknowledged wrongdoing, pleaded guilty, and accepted complete responsibility for the losses suffered by those who entrusted him with their investments; and he has expressed sincere remorse for the pain his actions have caused, all this bearing witness and testimony to the character of my long-time friend.

My purpose in writing this letter is not to diminish the gravity of what has occurred, but simply to offer my honest testimony concerning the character of the man I have known for many years and still know to this present day.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully,

Cleve Cunningham

One of my son-in laws and one of my sons own a Construction Company. The financial troubles in 2007 and 2008 and the closing of many small banks made it difficult if not impossible for them to get financing.

Brant Frost stepped up and got them an SBA loan. The loan was really needed and helped them move forward. Incidentally, their company is still operating thanks to Brant.

Dear Judge May,

I am writing to express my support for Brant Frost and to offer my perspective regarding his character. I have known Brant for more than 35 years, and throughout that time I have primarily interacted with him at Republican gatherings, pro-family events, and other community and faith-based occasions.

Brant has consistently demonstrated to me that his faith is genuine and important to him. I have seen in him a sincere desire to do the next right thing and to live according to the principles he believes in.

In every gathering where I have been with Brant, I have known him to conduct himself professionally while also making those around him feel comfortable and welcome. I have seen him show respect toward people in positions of authority. Equally important to me, I have watched him show that same respect and courtesy toward people serving behind a counter at a restaurant, working at an event, or simply going about their everyday responsibilities. I believe the way a person treats people in those circumstances says a great deal about his character.

I have also known Brant as a man of faith and as a man who cares deeply about his family. In every personal interaction I have had with him over these many years, he has been a man of his word with me.

Most recently, I saw Brant at a Republican gathering where we came together for prayer surrounding a Republican convention. Brant was there on the front row praying and standing firm in the faith and convictions that he holds dear. That was consistent with the man I have known for more than three decades.

I know that Brant and his family are going through a very difficult time, and I want to do whatever I appropriately can to support them. I respectfully offer this letter simply as my personal testimony regarding the character I have observed in Brant over the many years I have known him.

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to share these thoughts and for your consideration of this letter.

Respectfully submitted,

Dear Judge May,

I consider it a privilege to be allowed to tell you about my friend Brant Frost. I have known Brant and his wife for about 38 years, beginning with a political campaign in which we were all involved. I have known their children all of their lives. I would take a bullet for any member of his family, and as I have told others before, "I don't just love Brant and his family; I even love his in-laws, and I do."

In my life, I have had the privilege of knowing several great men. Most of them are not famous (although two or three I would consider somewhat famous) but all were honorable men of great integrity, strong convictions, and noble character. Knowing these men has shown me that I, too, can strive to have higher standards in my life, and that striving has made me a better person. Of these great men, Brant Frost is one of the best.

There is an old proverb that basically says that, just as you can judge whether a tree is good by examining its fruit, you can also judge a man by the fruit of his life. Brant Frost has had a life of good fruit. During my 38 years of knowing Brant, we have done business together, volunteered together, prayed together, and socialized together. I cannot recall him ever using a profane word, making an off-color joke or remark, or behaving dishonorably in any way. In those 38 years, I do not believe he ever told me he would do something and then failed to follow through. I never had to get him to promise to do something because his yes means yes and his no means no.

I remember once coming back from having lunch together. Having trouble finding a parking space, I dropped Brant off close to his office while I looked for a place to park. As I was walking back toward his office, I saw that he had stopped to talk to someone. The other gentleman was disheveled and was not the cleanest man I had ever met. Their conversation came to an end, and not seeing me, Brant continued on to his office. I could see that the man continued watching Brant as he walked away. As I came up to him, he noticed me and, not knowing that I knew Brant, pointed toward him and said, "There goes one of the finest men that ever walked." That moment has stayed with me.

However, no one knows the fruit of someone's life more intimately than the members of his own family. The Frosts have five children. As I mentioned before, I have known all five of them all of their lives. I know the character of these children, and like their dad, they reflect his outstanding character. They have never been in trouble, and without a doubt, all five adore their dad.

As just one example, here is something Brant's oldest daughter, Katie, posted on social media about nine years ago: "Happy 60th birthday to the single greatest influence in my life. As a little girl I always wanted to tag along with my dad. Not much has changed. When people ask me why my standards for guys are so high, it's obvious they haven't met my father. Dad, you're the gold standard. Thank you for giving me my optimism and extroverted personality. Thank you for teaching me to shoot, to read, to love classical music and how to throw a spiral. I'll always be your little girl. I love you, Dad."

The conflicts between mothers-in-law and sons-in-law are an endless source of jokes for comedians, but only because there is enough truth in the stereotype to make the jokes funny. I also know Brant's mother-in-law, having met her and the rest of her family at the same event where I first met Brant. It would be hard to find someone who has more class than Barbara Green. Poised, dignified, and graceful, she is also completely approachable. She is an insightful judge of character. Brant's eyes filled with tears as he told me that, at the height of all the attacks in the media against him and his family, and after losing all he had in his business, his mother-in-law came up to him, put her arms around him, and told him that if she had known before he and Krista married about all the troubles they would eventually go through, she still would have supported their marriage. It doesn't get much better than that.

Finally, I knew Brant's wife, Krista, before they were married. Not long ago, I attended a meeting that happened to include Krista. During that meeting, several people viciously attacked Brant. I was sitting only a row or two away from Krista and had a good view of her face. She was the picture of calm. Later, I sent her a text telling her that I thought she had handled it all with incredible strength. She basically replied, "It was very hard to listen to, but I know the heart of the man I married...." After nearly 40 years of close friendship, I know his heart as well. I also know the hearts of his wife, his children, and his in-laws.

Is it possible for people to be mistaken about someone's character? Of course it is. But nearly forty years is a very long time to observe a man in business, in friendship, in his family, in good times, and in difficult ones.

Brant is one of the most optimistic men I have ever known. He strives to be a gentleman in word and deed. We often have lunch together. As we take our seats in the restaurant, he frequently strikes up a conversation with people sitting nearby. If he sees someone he knows, he will walk over and say a quick hello. I have watched him treat servers with respect and genuine gratitude for their service. In larger restaurants, he asks the servers to convey his gratitude to those who prepared the food. In smaller ones, I have watched him stick his head into the kitchen and personally thank everyone. These are small things, perhaps, but after watching a man for nearly four decades, small things tell you a great deal about who he really is.

All businesses contain both reward and risk. All successful businesses have good years and bad years, and all businessmen make both good decisions and bad decisions. That is the rule, not the exception. However, making a bad decision is not the same thing as making a dishonest or malicious one.

I cannot speak to every decision Brant has ever made. I can speak only to the man I have personally known for nearly forty years. In all that time, I have never known him to be dishonest, dishonorable, or intentionally harmful to another person. The Brant Frost I know is a man of faith, integrity, loyalty, kindness, and strong character. I am proud to call him my friend.

Respectfully,

Jim Fernander
